SOHO20's artist members' annual group exhibition, on view through December 21, is a celebration of varying creative practices, and an exploration into the conversations that develop when the resulting works inhabit a common space. Relational Ground: Defying the Status Quo deconstructs the latent value of a show title while highlighting its potential unrestrictive nature. The title, ironically and spontaneously selected through an online "random exhibition title generator," was embraced as a means to avoid suppressing content into thematic structure. Pushing the boundaries of language systems and perceptual experience, the exhibition denies spectators the ability to draw any steadfast conclusions, instead giving weight to their agency in interpreting the works on view.
